

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL TEAM HAS CHANCE FOR TITLE

THEFT OF FOURTH CAR IS ADMITTED BY YOUNG ROBBER

Rock Falls Youth Tells Where he Disposed of Decatur Car

Paul Keyes, 17-year-old Rock Falls youth and confessed automobile thief, has disclosed where he disposed of a fourth car which he now says he stole during the summer. Last evening while being questioned by Chief Deputy William Rose and Chief of Police J. D. Van Bibber Keyes is said to have confessed the theft of a Chevrolet touring car which he took from the streets of Decatur, Ill., May 29.

It also developed according to his relation of affairs, that his father, who lives in Decatur, did not supply him with funds with which to return to Rock Falls when he went to visit the parent at Decatur in May. The boy was without money and said he contemplated beating his way back on freight trains, but on account of delays and cool weather, took a Chevrolet touring car from the streets and drove it to Rock Falls.

Sold Car to Junkman.

The car, according to his story, was in poor condition when he took it and after arriving at Rock Falls he had it repaired in Sterling. The car did not suit him when the repairs had been made and he took it to the Manfield junk yard on Locust street, where he claims to have disposed of it for $10.00. In the meantime he had come to Dixon and taken the Chevrolet touring car belonging to Hiram Winters of Oregon.

Chief Van Bibber yesterday caught up on Keyes' story of having purchased the Chevrolet touring car from a Fred Nankis, 1904 Prairie avenue, Decatur, yesterday afternoon and learned that there was no such person or street. Confronted with this information Keyes admitted to the fourth theft.

In each of the four thefts he chose 1923 model cars and all of the Chevrolet make. His first two cars were of the touring type and the last pair were sedans. Thus far the authorities have found that three of these were stolen in Dixon and one from Decatur.

A member of the Chicago automobile detect bureau was to arrive in Dixon this afternoon to investigate the theft of a Ford roadster taken from the loop Monday afternoon by John Farley and James Hines, 15-year-old youths, who are being held at the county jail. The car is being held in an Ashton garage where the boys were taken in custody. They will doubtless be taken back to Chicago for trial.

Being "Beaned" With Stone Mug Is No Fun

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Being hit with a stone beer mug on the head isn't what it is cracked up to be, says Olga Cook, prima donna of "The Student Prince," who has reason to know.

Miss Cook, as the inn keeper's daughter, in the first act, was making love to the prince while the chorus of students sang drinking songs and waved steins. One of them missed his aim and the mug crashed down on her head.

Dazed, Miss Cook was taken off the stage and an understudy continued the part.

A reinforced wig designed to withstand shocks, will be worn by Miss Cook hereafter.

Proposed Sixth "Great Lake" to Overcome Canal

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 6.—(AP)—An outline of his plan for the creation of a "sixth great lake" in northern Ontario for the purpose of overcoming Chicago's diversion of the waters of Lake Michigan was placed before the boards of trade and commerce of Ontario at their banquet last night by C. L. Campbell of Toronto.

The proposal in brief is for the building of two dams across the Albany and Ogoki rivers and turning the waters away from James and Hudson Bays and into Lake Nipigon. This, Mr. Campbell said, would create a lake twice the size of Lake Ontario. An area of 18,000 square miles would be submerged. The cost of the project was approximately $200,000,000, but none of the expense would fall on the shoulders of the province of Ontario.

Mr. Campbell said he had been accused of playing into the hands of Chicago with regard to the project, but he gave assurance such was not the case. The project will come up for consideration today by the delegates at the various boards of trade.

Holmes, formerly Miss Maude Cole, would arrive in Dixon via the Northwestern at 6:54 o'clock Sunday morning. Funeral services will be held at the Preston chapel at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Rev. FLEXIBLE RATES OF TARIFF ARE LENROOT'S PLEA

Says President Should be Given Chance to Act Quickly

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A change in the basic principle of the flexible tariff so that the President may move more swiftly to raise or lower rates, was proposed here today by Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin.

Speaking before the Tanners' Council of the United States, the Senator said the price at which an imported commodity is laid down at the port of entry in this country should be accepted as the foreign production cost. The tariff rate then should be raised or lowered on the basis of the difference between that price, less a percentage for profit and brokerage charges, and the cost of producing the American article of like character.

Under the present system, the foreign cost of production must be ascertained through agents sent abroad before the President may act to change the tariff rates. Such an investigation consumes much time, Senator Lenroot said, calling attention by way of illustration that at his request the President ordered an investigation about 18 months ago of the differences in the cost of production of butter and cheese at home and abroad. The investigation still is incomplete, he added, and meantime many millions of pounds of butter have been imported at the great injury of the dairy industry of the United States.

Senator Lenroot argued also that the prohibition against transferring commodities from the free to the dutiable list and vice versa should be removed.

"In other words," he said, "our whole tariff system should be made consistent and harmonious. It should be flexible to meet changing conditions. Under this plan, speedy action can be secured whenever necessary, expensive investigations are of little value, can be avoided.

Cars Damaged in Mishap on Peoria Ave. Last Eve

An Oldsmobile sedan belonging to Walter W. Trautman, ticket agent at the Northwestern depot, was considerably damaged last evening about 5:30 on Peoria avenue south of Seventh street, where it was parked, when George Moeller, driving a Ford touring car, crashed into it as he turned out to pass a wagon, it is said.

Moeller's face was cut by bits of glass from his broken windshield, otherwise he escaped injury. Both cars were badly damaged and were taken to garages for repairs.

CALLS PROHIBITION FIELD A CHALLENGE TO YOUTH OF LAND

Opportunity to Serve Flag and Face All Kinds of Danger

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A challenge to American youth to enlist for service in defense of the constitution with plenty of action and danger assured, was issued today by the Rev. M. P. Boynton of Chicago in a memorial service at the Anti-Saloon League convention for nearly fifty prohibition officers killed in action.

"We have now the full equivalent of war," he said, "with greater hazards for the prohibition soldiers than the men at the front in the World War."

"If any of the young college men of today want action and a chance to fight for their country, I urge them to report to General Andrews. They will have a chance to be their own captains, their own companies and their exploits, if such as 'Lone Wolf' Asher, which will go down in the annals of our country's patriots, are a sample of what a young man looking for adventure can find today."

Hear Committee Report.

Report of the congressional investigation of enforcement of the Volstead law was given the Anti-Saloon League convention today in a report prepared by Representative G. M. Hudson, Ohio, chairman of the congressional committee.

The information was gained from thousands of questionnaires sent out by the committee to federal and state officers, social and welfare organizations and leaders in industrial and commercial life.

"It is very doubtful if any brewer in the United States today can successfully operate a so-called beer business," Representative Hudson said, "unless they run it in connection with some other business or violation of the law. The law should be amended so as to make all manufacturers of cereal beverage plants obtain a government permit. So long as there are breweries there will be attempted violations."

The control of the genuine whiskey supply in the country, Representative Hudson said, was quite effective now, twenty-two millions of the thirty-three million gallons still in bond being in concentration warehouses and the previous leaks fairly well stopped.

Two Ships on Lakes are Known to be in Distress

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Two ships were known to be in distress and many others scurried for cover in one of the worst storms of the season which struck Lake Superior last night.

The Hanonite, a Canadian passenger and freight steamer, was reported by radio with her propeller gone and being driven helplessly by a fifty mile gale, 20 miles west of Caribou Island.

It was considered improbable she was carrying passengers this late in the season. She carries a crew of 40 men.

The William Roberts, a freighter, is also drifting with her propeller gone, according to another radio intercept at Eagle Harbor.

She is near Point Aux Barques in Lake Huron.

Floor of Field Museum 350,000,000 Years Old?

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The floor of the Field Museum is 350,000,000 years old.

Visitors and officials have been walking across the marble unknown to what they were treading a veritable paleontological carpet. Grotesque shapes embedded in it have been identified by Dr. H. W. Nichols of the department of geology of the Museum, as fossilized shells that lived in the Mississippi valley before the dawn of history. The fossils include a coralline type of shell called archimedean, the crinoid or stone lily, the clam and brachiopod.

The marble was quarried in Missouri.

DEATH MESSAGE, LETTER, ARRIVE SIMULTANEOUSLY

Newcomers Get Word of Daughter's Death With Her Letter

According to information received by Mrs. Hixley of Polo from her sister, Mrs. William Sanford of Lakeland, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Newcomer had just received and were reading a letter from their daughter, Miss Orleans, telling of her progress in her musical studies in Milan, Italy, when the cablegram announcing her sudden death from heart trouble in a hotel in the foreign city Saturday was delivered to them.

The cablegram, according to the word received in Polo, was sent to the Mayor of Lakeland, who called Mrs. Sanford, a very intimate friend of the Newcomers, and asked her to transmit the sad message. Mrs. Sanford, however, enlisted the aid of the Presbyterian minister, and arrived at the Newcomer home with his sad message just as they were rejoicing in the contents of a optimistic letter from their only child, who was nearing completion of her preparation in the world of music.

No further details than those contained in a letter Mr. Newcomer to City Clerk Blake Grover, received Thursday afternoon, have been learned here concerning the funeral of the young lady. Mr. Newcomer's letter stated his daughter's body would be cremated in Milan and that the ashes would be brought to this country by Miss Josephine Altman, a fellow student, and a daughter of the late Dr. F. D. Altman, former pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church of Dixon. Whether the ashes will be brought to Dixon for burial is not known.

BAPTISMAL RITES MARKED SERVICE AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Half Dozen Converts of Revival Immersed Thursday Eve.

Two dozen or more visitors from the Grace Evangelical church increased the numbers and enthusiasm of the Christian church revival last night. Pastor Brandt's illness, which kept him from accompanying them, is much regretted. Some were also present from Pine Creek, and it was the largest week-night crowd yet, additional chairs being required for seats.

A spirited devotional and praise service was conducted by Miss Graves, in the midst of which the room was darkened except for lights directly above the baptismal pool, while the pastor immersed, after the manner of the Saviour's own baptism, a half dozen of the early converts of the revival. Mr. Williamson recited Bible passages while the candidates one by one, in language of Holy Scripture, "buried into Christ" through baptism into death.

Miss Graves and Miss Floto added a most appealing evangelistic duet to the song service, and Miss Graves sang solos before and after the sermon, the second, "Just Outside the Door," by special request.

"How Ten Men Came Back" might have been the title-piece for the sermon of the evening, in which the story of Jesus' healing of the leper was used. The awfulness of separation from home, business, society and friends, through the incurable pest-house plague of leprosy was pictured; the sudden joys of hope from rumors of the power of the Healer of Galilee; the hoarse, desperate cry, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us!" the quick obedience of an eager, seeking faith; and the attainment of the "second blessing" by the one grateful "foreigner" (Samaritan)—these were dramatically presented with skillful sequence in an address of touching power and emotion. The parallelism between spiritual sin and bodily leprosy was drawn most effectively.

Applause was given the meaningful verse, "and as they went, they were healed." Said Mr. Williamson: "You just start to obey God, and the blessings will come as fast as you can take care of them. Don't stop to ask questions in the face of the commands of Jesus. If you press me by asking what virtue there is in the bread and wine of the communion, or in the water of baptism, I'll say there's none whatever in these alone; but in the obedience to God that you are hidden to express toward Him through these ceremonies there is all virtue, all efficacy, all importance."

Tonight a large delegation is expected from the Twin Cities and possibly some from Rock Island and Moline. The sermon will be "God's Call to Sacrifice."

BOY SCOUTS, TROOP 2.

A very important meeting of Knights of Columbus Troop Boy Scout, known as Troop 2, will be held at the Countryman hall at 7 o'clock this evening. Every member of the troop is expected.

DEFENSE FIGHTING HARD TO KEEP OUT DAMAGING EVIDENCE

Cominsky Murder Trial at Morrison Draws Large Crowds

(Telegraph Special Service)
Morrison, Ill., Nov. 6.—Just before court recessed for noon the state rested its case against John Cominsky of Cottonwoods, charged with the murder of Mrs. Marie McKee, night telephone operator at Fulton, on the night of Sept. 23.

Morrison, Ill., Nov. 6.—(AP)—With the defense fighting desperately, through cross examination, to discredit witnesses, the state continued today to introduce evidence in the Whiteside county circuit court in an effort to send John Cominsky, Cottonwoods farmer, to the gallows for the murder of Mrs. Marie McKee, of Fulton, night telephone operator, strangled to death in the exchange during the night of September 22 to 23.

Cominsky, former sweetheart of the dead woman, retains the severity of manner that has marked his demeanor since his arrest on the morning of Sept. 23, following discovery of the body. Only less stoical is the defendant's 30 year old mother, who sits in the court room weeping at times, but more frequently displaying what appears to be apathy.

Cross Examined Brother

Witnesses late yesterday included John Lorenzon, brother of the murdered woman, who was cross examined concerning his sister's relation with various men, especially a dark complexioned Clinton man in whose company it is claimed she was seen on the night of the murder. He denied knowledge of the man's identity.

The defense also resisted testimony for the state tending to show that "finger prints found on the screen removed by the murderer and those taken from Cominsky's fingers are identical and testimony relative to an attempted entrance to the exchange by Cominsky on the night of June 9, precipitated a wordy battle between the attorneys.

Crowds that pack the court room to capacity are attending every session, the trial attracting people from all sections of the country. The streets for blocks in all directions are packed solidly with parked cars.

LEGION ELEVEN HOPES TO HOLD CLINTON BUNCH

Local Football Stars Realize They Face Hard Proposition

Coach Paul Dee had his gladiators out last night for a hard drill in preparation for the toughest game of the season when the Dixon Legion goes to Clinton Sunday for a return engagement. The crew has been hard at work all week getting in shape for this battle and while not conceding enough to believe that they can beat Coach Lester Belding's Indians, the players hope to at least tie the count and at any rate give them the hardest battle they have fought this year.

With an even division of the brackets of the game, which are highly important factors to be considered, the Dixon Legion is evenly matched and practice shows the locals have a very good chance. Some new styles of play have been developed to interest the Clintonites and the line has been strengthened to hold off the smashing attack which proved a ground galmer for the visitors here a few weeks ago. Clinton is said to have four college men ready to start against Dixon. Belding and McIntyre of Iowa and Gladwin and Graves of Dubuque, all of whom were seen in action here.

Former Cashier of Sublette Bank Dead

The body of Lester Geiger, for several years cashier of the Sublette bank, found under the ice in the C. & B. & Q. Railway pool at Mendota Sunday morning after an all night search, instituted when the young man, in ill health as the result of a recent attack of ptomaine poisoning, failed to return home to his widowed mother for supper. A verdict of accidental death was returned, it being the belief of the coroner's jury that the youth, a veteran of the World War, had walked out on the ice, broken through and was unable to get out because of his weakened condition.

Rubbish in Basement on Peoria Ave. Caught Fire

The fire department was summoned to 211 North Peoria avenue this morning at 10:45 to extinguish a fire which had started in rubbish in the basement. The fire was extinguished before the department arrived, with no loss to the property.

Reporter Tells How He Got Hold of Davis' Speech

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Reporters sixty years ago were not lacking in ingenuity, for one of them obtained a carefully prepared speech from the tall pocket of Jefferson Davis' coat, wired it to his paper and returned it to the confederate leader, all without suspicion attaching to himself.

The reporter was the Rev. Sam Small of Washington, D. C., pioneer Anti-Saloon League worker, and a confederate soldier, at the age of 16. Here attending the anti-Saloon League meeting, he told the story today.

"I was a correspondent for some southern papers," he said "Jeff Davis came to town to speak and I tried to get his speech and failed. So as I helped him on with his coat. I took the speech from the tall pocket and rushed over to the telegraph office."

"While I was gone the President was introduced and arose to speak. After a fruitless search for the manuscript the program was hastily changed while Davis and his aides in some confusion extended the scope of their search."

"In the meantime the speech had been cleared to my paper and I came back and joined the searchers on the platform. Dropping the manuscript behind the confederate leader, I quickly picked it up, handing it to him with the remark."

"Here it is Mr. Davis; you must have dropped it."

"He expressed his thanks as did the committee."

Willis Tolman of Franklin Grove is Dead at Home There

(Telegraph Special Service)
Franklin Grove, Nov. 6.—Willis Tolman, a life-long resident of Franklin Grove, where he was born 69 years ago, died at his home here at 10:30 this morning after an illness of considerable duration. He was one of the well known and respected citizens of the place, and his death brings sorrow to many friends. The body will be taken to Chicago Monday for cremation, after which the ashes will be brought back to Franklin for interment.

Sought Rockford Auto Accessory Thieves Here

Chief Deputy Sheriff Harry Baldwin of Rockford and Sergeant Robinson of the Rockford police department were in Dixon late yesterday afternoon investigating the operations of robbers who entered several garages in that city Wednesday night and left with several hundred dollars worth of tires and automobile accessories. A Dodge coupe is also believed to have been stolen by the parties.

DIXON HIGH ALL PRIMED FOR BIG GAME OF SEASON

Local Eleven Going Strong for Conference Title. This Year

Dixon's high school football team, undefeated and contenders for the conference title, are ready for a hard battle tomorrow afternoon against the Rochelle high school team at the north side athletic field. Spurred on by an arrival of ideal football weather the team went through a hard practice session last night. Coaches Bowers and Culley sent their charges through one of the hardest scrimmages of the year in order to prepare the team for the Ogles county invitational forces. Rochelle's style of play was given to the second string men and were stopped before they got under way.

Two or three changes have been made in the line and the back field since the last game. These seem to have added a great deal of fight and speed to the team as a whole.

"Captain Gus Bondi seems to be at his best and is sure to set the team a hot pace, and it is very seldom that a play goes over him. Harry Weinman is sure to hold his own on his side line, while 'Beans' Kerst and Frank Keller will surely take care of the center. 'Bill' Johnson, 'Barney' Cass and 'Moon' Reagan are three ends that seldom let a play go around them and are always down under punts."

Backfield is Fast.

In the back field "Chuck" Keyes and "Red" McReynolds have added a great deal of speed to their running the past two weeks and are two men to be feared by any team.

Gordon McNeil is in a class by himself when it comes to plunging, kicking and passing. He is without a doubt the best full back in the conference this year and a lot is expected of him.

It certainly should be a real game and fans who are unfortunate enough not to be able to attend the college contests, will find ample entertainment at the north side athletic field commencing promptly at 2:30. Hartwell of Cornell will referee and Snell of Aurora will umpire. Arrangements have been made to announce the results of the college games during the contest for the convenience of the fans.

Fasting Clears the Eyes Says London Naturopath

London, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Fasting clears the eyes and also the other organs of sense and makes them more acute, in the opinion of Clement Jeffery, a naturopath. He believes in the prevention of defective vision and its improvement by methods other than the use of eye glasses.

"The first point is that the efficiency of the eye depends to a large extent on the quality of the blood that brings nourishment to them," he said. "Their delicate mechanism can be clogged by overeating, particularly of sugar, just as the wheels of a watch are interfered with by dust."

He did not minimize the benefit that the skill of the oculist has conferred on mankind, but asserted that parents too often resorted to eye glasses for their children and that these did more harm than good.

Aeronautic Association Recognizes New Records

Washington, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The National Aeronautic Association has recognized as world's records the performances of Lieutenant Cyrus Bettis of the Army in winning the Pulitzer race at Mitchell Field and of Lieutenant J. H. Doolittle, also of the Army, in winning the Schneider trophy at Baltimore.

Lieutenant Bettis in an airplane made 190 kilometers at a rate of 248.337 miles an hour and 290 kilometers at a rate of 248.975.

Lieutenant Doolittle in a seaplane made a maximum straightaway speed of 245.713 miles an hour and for 100 kilometers he traveled at 234.772 miles an hour.

Girl Died from Poison
Defense Witnesses Say
Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Additional testimony by which it hopes to clear D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klenck and Earl Gentry on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Madge Oberholzer, was presented by the defense in Hamilton circuit court today.

It was the purpose of Eph Imman, chief of counsel for the former Klux Klan leader and his bodyguards, to try to convince the jury that the girl died from the effects of self-administered poison. Medical authorities were placed on the stand to give testimony to bear out that hypothesis.

There was no chance for Miss Oberholzer to recover from the poison she took after she kept it a secret for six hours, thereby preventing immediate medical aid. Dr. J. W. Williams of Indianapolis testified, as the first witness today.

THE CLOUD—

I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers.

From the seas and the streams;

I bear light shade for the leaves when laid

In their noonday dreams.

From my wings are shaken the dews that waken

The sweet buds every one,

When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,

As she dances about the sun.

I wield the flail of the lashing hail,

And whiten the green plains under;

And then again I dissolve it in rain,

And laugh as I pass in thunder.

—Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Stewed figs with lemon, cereal, thin cream, fried cornmeal mush with syrup, crisp graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Peanut butter cream soup, croutons, cottage cheese and rye bread sandwiches, stuffed apples, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Veal stew with dumplings, candied sweet potatoes, jellied vegetables salad, graham bread, preserves, toasted crackers and cheese, milk, coffee.

A broiled lamb chop or soft cooked egg should be provided for a child under school age in place of the meat stew with dumplings. While many mothers find it out of the question to serve lamb chops to the entire family it is imperative that the "baby" has this delicacy occasionally, particularly when the family is enjoying a forbidden dish of some sort.

Stuffed Apples.

Four apples, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon seeded and chopped raisins, 1 tablespoon stoned and chopped dates, 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Wash apples and remove cores taking care not to break the apple. Pare a strip 1/2 inch wide around the center of the apple. This helps to prevent the apple from bursting the skin during baking. Combine sugar, chopped fruit, butter and lemon juice. Fill cavities of apples with this mixture and put into a covered baking dish.

Bake in a slow oven, keeping the dish covered until the apples are about half done. Then remove cover and finish baking. It will take about one hour to bake the apples. Remove from oven and baking dish. Pour over any juice in the dish and serve cold with whipped cream.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Again the quest on bobs up, "What is happiness? How can it be attained?"

This time it's a news item that brings up the query. "Fifi" Widener Leidy has sued for divorce at Norris town, Pa.

Nearly six years ago "Fifi" daughter of Joseph W. Widener, millionaire art collector, eloped with a relatively poor young man, Carter Leidy, University of Pennsylvania student. Confident that their love would stand the grueling of time, they acceded to demands of the bride's father that the young husband prove himself.

Young Leidy went to work in a foundry at Berwick, Pa., starting in as a laborer. The couple, apparently happy, lived on his salary, entertained their friends among his fellow workmen, and survived the probation period. They were welcomed home after a year by Widener and commenced living the life to which "Fifi" had been accustomed.

Rumors of trouble began almost a year ago, when "Fifi" made a trip to Europe alone. She denied that she was intending to obtain a divorce abroad, but the rumors proved themselves true after her return.

The papers in the divorce suit have been impounded, and the allegations made are not known except to "Fifi" and her attorneys, but the fact remains that the marriage, which started with so much promise, has gone on a reef.

It is evident that money alone cannot bring happiness, because the young couple now have ample for their needs. It would be equally wrong, however, to credit poverty with being the answer. The Leidys were in their first year of marriage then. Although poor, they still had the excitement of a new situation and new problems to carry them through.

In the end, it always happens that true happiness in married life can come only from mutual affection, mutual respect and mutual desires for the present and the future. When infatuation departs and the continual test of life begins, it is those who have chosen wisely and with a knowledge of the real personality of their partners who can truthfully say they have been happy as they near the close of life.

Woman's Missionary Society Meeting

Mrs. Harry Stauffer, graciously opened her home to the Woman's Missionary Society of the Christian church, for the November meeting, held Thursday afternoon. The meeting opened with song, followed by circle of prayer. A report was then made by chairman of the committee concerning clothing for our little orphan. The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and approved, also several letters. The aims for the society voted upon and accepted were as follows: Membership, fifty offerings, $200. World call subscriptions, fifteen. Plans were then discussed for a number of the ladies, who could, to attend the "One Day Convention Thursday, Nov. 12, at the 15th Avenue Christian church at Rock Island, of which Rev. Guy B. Williamson is the pastor. During the singing of a song, the offering was taken; after the business session presided over by the president, Mrs. Cleaver, ended. Mrs. Harry Stauffer took charge of the program. The devotional was given by Mrs. Reagan, "Our Lord's Prayer," taken from "Mother Rosettes" book, "Altar Songs." Following this, a splendid talk was given by Mrs. L. L. McGinnis on the "Saves in America." Rev. Williamson then spoke of the convention held in Oklahoma City, he spoke of the hospitality shown to the delegates, the lines of autos with stickers and posters, reading, "This car is for your use." All one had to do was raise their hand, a car would stop, pick them up, and take them anywhere they wished to go. The young people of the Philip's University furnished an inspiring song service at the convention. He told of the Sunrise Prayer meeting held at the Capital, with over 2000 present, and spoke of the deep reverence shown at this service. The society then sang a song, and Rev. Cleaver offered the closing prayer.

During the social hour, delicious refreshments were served by the committee.

Engagement Was Announced at Tea

Mrs. W. H. Coppins and Mrs. Dwight Chapman entertained at a most enjoyable tea given yesterday afternoon at the home of Prof. and Mrs. W. H. Coppins and an engagement of much interest locally, especially to those of the younger set, was made known. Miss Alice Coppins and Clayton Westland of Boston, Mass., are to be married Saturday, Nov. 21, at the home of the bride.

At the charming afternoon yesterday forty-five guests were entertained, chrysanthemums, the queen of autumn flowers, and foliage, being the artistic decorations.

At the daintily appointed table in the dining room, with yellow candles and lovely yellow and white chrysanthemums, Mrs. Everett Dutcher and Miss Calla Greig poured. Mrs. Catherine Ross, Mrs. Dement Schuler and Miss Frances Patrick assisted in serving the guests.

The announcement of the engagement was made on dainty white cards attached to a miniature white shepherd's crook, the handle tied with tulle, and a tiny silver bell.

The out-of-town guests present, included Mrs. Stanwood Griffith of Ash-ton; Mrs. Sidney Elchler of Amboy; Mrs. George Friese of Galena, and Mrs. Ruth Recknitz of Denver, Colo.

Dixon will be loath to lose Miss Coppins, a beautiful and talented girl. She is a violinist of marked ability and has been a valued acquisition to the musical circles of the city.

THE BOOM IN LOCAL PRIDE.

Whether the Florida boom was the forerunner of many booms, or whether it was merely the most prominent feature of a widespread movement for local boosting and development is hard to say. At any rate there is today hardly a community of any energy or industry at all that is not taking its own possibilities and future very seriously. From one section in the south come three striking statements.

St. Tammany, La., announces, "We have possibilities or potential opportunities even greater than Florida had. Climate, soil, water, transportation, fruit growing, trucking, fishing, inland waterways and lake frontage. Florida is a wonderful state and has done wonderful things. But we wish to call attention to the fact that Louisiana can develop as rapidly as Florida has if her people will go in for publicity and do the things that should be done."

From Natchez, Miss., comes this forceful statement: "We have a very substantial and meaningful message for the world. This city is the heart of a country of opportunities. No other in this whole section of the south is more happily circumstanced. We can do more different kinds of useful things in this city and section, and can prosecute these activities for a longer period during the year, than the people of any other city and section in the whole breadth of this republic."

From Shreveport, La., comes this: "This is the 'Pep City of America.' In days of sunshine and of tempest Shreveport traditionally has exhibited the 'pep' required by the occasion. It is a city in which the people know how to work together. And in their co-operation there always is 'pep.'"

Dixon likewise has perked up, and through our chamber of commerce big things are sure to come our way. North, south, east and west, similar communities are discovering themselves and awaking to their opportunities and bestirring themselves to grasp them. The enthusiasm may not last to fulfillment in every case, but the general stirring up is likely to produce many good results. Advertising is a good thing. When communities advertise the truth about themselves, they are sure to profit. It is far better than having many communities sitting back complaining because a few others have all the luck and prosperity.

BOLSHEVISM AND RELIGION.

Bolshevism, which has reversed its decision against capital and capitalism, is likewise on the point of admitting its error in having denounced God and the Christian religion. It robbed the churches and murdered many of the priests, now it is seeking to give religion a new start in Russia. The bolsheviks, as did the extreme French revolutionists, have found that it is against their interests to deprive a people of their traditional religion.

Announcement is made of a so-called Holy Synod of Moscow, that a pan-Russian church congress is to be held in Moscow, Oct. 1. The congress is to meet in the Moscow Cathedral of the Savior, and its aim is to find a way of reconciliation between the various religious and church parties which have sprung up since the Russian revolution. It is certain that the abolition by Lenin of the national church in Russia has been disastrous. And now that the bolsheviks fear an impending catastrophe they seek to appease the popular demand for restitution of the old orthodox faith.

The remnants and factions of the old church which will assemble in Moscow are antagonistic and warring against each other. The two chief parties are the Tychonists, followers of the late Father Tychon—who resisted Lenin until his death—and the so-called apostolic church, a creation of the soviet government and its obedient tool. The former are by far the most numerous section of the old church.

The bolshevist holy synod has also invited the Greek patriarch to be present, and upon his friendly attitude will largely depend the smoothing over of the church conflicts in Russia.

SERVICE AND PROFIT.

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of prosperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organization should give it. Service brings prosperity."

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service. Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it as a whole thinks first of service.

United States Attorney Buckner in New York has announced that hereafter all aliens convicted twice of the manufacture or sale of liquor will be deported; also that those found guilty of the possession of liquor on three arrests will be deported. Possibly this will bring a rush for naturalization by aliens desiring to violate the liquor laws.

Sometimes it seems to us that royalty is reduced to the status of a matrimonial bureau.

BY CHESTER H. ROWELL

It is a great country we live in; great in size and yet yearly smaller in accessibility; infinitely varied and yet one, more uniform than any equal body of humanity on earth.

This is written in Reno, Nevada, an enterprising wide-awake, western town, which the outside world knows for only one thing and that the thing which concerns the natives least of all.

It is only a night's ride away from California, and yet it is already a different world. Last night it was summer in California; this morning it was winter in Truckee, and today it is crisp autumn in Reno, the sharp air and the coloring leaves speaking of the impending winter which in California we forget is a part of the normal year elsewhere.

Tomorrow morning it will be summer in California again. Thus modern improvements defy the laws of space and time.

Reno, to its exotic colonists, who come here as to a hospital, for an operation of social surgery, is "out of the world"—that is, out of their world.

They are as provincial as the natives, and find the adjustment from New York to Reno much harder than the native of Reno would find it in the reverse direction. But to the true Nevada, it is not out of the world.

It is the center of his world, and a good world it is. Even the vast uninhabited spaces, which constitute most of Nevada, are something of inspiring beauty.

In the mountains is gold and silver, and in the watered valleys is soil of unmatched richness. There is only a little of it, but what there is is good.

And to the natives, it is home.

In empty space, Nevada is a great empire, nearly as large as France. In people, it is a little town. The total population is perhaps seventy thousand—less than many a minor suburb or country county seat further east.

But it must have all the paraphernalia of a state. It has a governor, a legislature, the usual complement of state officers, two United States senators, and a congressman. The same number of people in an eastern town would probably be governed by five commissioners and a few administrative employees appointed by them.

But, to counter this extravagance of administrative overhead, there is also a state university at Reno with a student population of over 1 per cent of the total population of the state.

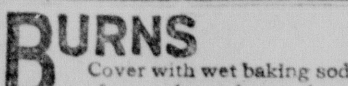

New York, to do as well, would have to have a great state university of a hundred thousand students. If the divorcees think their temporary exile a hardship by reason of the "lack of culture" of the woolly west, this is the answer.

The American Federation of Labor is opposed to the registration of aliens because the registers would be used to spy on the unions.

Doubtless the fears of the unionists are not unfounded. Our union busters in America are capable of a lot of things in what they imagine is their holy cause, and this may be among them.

And yet, precisely this system of registering and keeping track, not only of aliens, but of everybody, has always been the custom in many of the countries from which these immigrants come, and it has not had that effect there. It should not here, and will not, if our capitalists will once recognize that unionism is not only inevitable but right and beneficial.

NO. 17—SOME POEMS WITHOUT NAMES

So the Clown began: "I climbed to the top of a tree."

"Let us make up some poetry," said the Clown. "It's a lot of fun if you take turns adding a line. I'll say one line and the person beside me adds a line and the person next to him adds a third line and so on. Five lines to one poem."

As all the High Jinks people were still sitting in a circle after the riddle telling, it was quite easy to do.

So the Clown began:

"I climbed to the top of a tree,"

And the Sweep, who was next said:

"That grew down below the blue sea,"

And the Old Shoe Woman said:

"There is no use talking,"

And Diddle Dimppling John said:

"I have quite lost my stocking,"

And the Little Dog said:

"And barked a big piece off my knee."

"Hurrah!" shouted Nick. "That's a lot of fun. Let's have some more."

So they went on right around the circle, but as you don't care and I really don't care about who said all the lines, I shall only put down what the verses sounded like. They don't make much sense, but I think the High Jinks people did pretty well to make them even sound right.

These are the verses they made up:

"A mouse caught his tail in a trap. While his mother was having a nap. 'Blue's my color,' said she, 'Can you count up to three?'

I will say he is having a snap."

This was the next verse:

employees through the union is futile, short-sighted and wrong.

The defense of the rights of the employer should be against unjust demands of the unions, not against their right to be dealt with to make any demands or bargains.

Once let capital become enlightened enough for this, and labor should be also enlightened enough to forego its opposition to the registration system. In fact, it may have to be enlightened itself without waiting for capital.

For this system, in the long run, is the only way to make the immigration act effective. And labor is the chief beneficiary of that act.

If any alien who can once smuggle in is safe ever after, the immigration act will be of little protection to American labor.

SEVERE STORMS DUE OVER THREE MIDWEST FIELDS

Unusual Hot Rivalry in Several Conference Games Tomorrow

Chicago, Nov. 6—(AP)—The mid-west football atmosphere is surcharged today with impending storms due to burst forth tomorrow in the Michigan-Northwestern game in Chicago, the Chicago-Illinois game in Urbana and the Iowa-Wisconsin contest in Iowa City.

Michigan and its uncrossed goal are in Chicago for the first time in years. Except Edwards, Coach Yost has every one of his stars ready for the fray, including Benny Friedman, star quarterback. Northwestern may start Baker though his bad ankle may prevent his taking much of a part in the game.

The much-razed Chicago Maroons leave for Urbana to be the guests of Red Grange and others of Coach Zuppke's reception committee of eleven. Upwards of 70,000 fans are gathering in Urbana to see the famous Red in his final home own appearance in a Big Ten game.

Though Chicago is undefeated in the Western Conference and Illinois has been downed twice, the respective showings of the teams against Pennsylvania gave the melee paramount interest.

Kutsch May Be Out
Injuries may bar Iowa's flying dutchman, Nick Kutsch, though he may assist in dispensing hospitality to the visiting Badgers. Coach Little of Wisconsin led a picked squad of thirty out of Madison, hopeful of upsetting the Hawkeye's title hopes.

On its fourth trip in as many weeks Rockne's rambling Notre Dame team is en-route of State College, Pennsylvania. The team had little practice after its return from Georgia Tech, but expects to dispose of the Pennsylvania Staters in the regular order of things.

The full teams make up the Hoosier contingent invading Ohio State. Welcoming, facing the prospect of playing on a bad field, end workouts with rehearsals of falling on the ball.

The same team that faced Wisconsin will be Minnesota's starter against Butler.

Purdue will save some of its regulars for coming games with Northwestern and Indiana and will utilize second stringers against Franklin.

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, United States
Public Health Service

Pneumonia causes about one-tenth of all deaths in this part of the world. Pneumonia stands second on the list of diseases arranged in order of the number of deaths caused and is surpassed only by heart disease.

The term pneumonia includes two chief types of inflammation of the lungs. These types are bronchial pneumonia, which is more prevalent at the extremes of life, that is, during youth and old age, and lobar pneumonia, more prevalent among persons in middle life.

From the age of five to adolescence, pneumonia is relatively uncommon and by comparison often mild, but beginning with adult life pneumonia exhibits a steadily increasing severity until in the very old it becomes nearly always fatal. It is strikingly a disease of the cold months.

Pneumonia is a germ disease. Several kinds of bacteria are capable of producing pneumonia. These same kinds of bacteria may be found in the mouths, noses and throat of persons who are apparently in perfect health. Indeed, some of these bacteria are found so commonly in the nose, mouth and throat as to be regarded as the normal inhabitants of these places.

It has been found that the apparently harmless germs taken from the throat of healthy persons are never theless deadly to species of animals which have feeble powers of resistance, which fact teaches us that people who are in a debilitated or run-down condition are more susceptible to pneumonia.

Measles, whooping cough, influenza and other infections very frequently prepare for the development of pneumonia by lowering the resistance of the person to the bacteria always present in his mouth and throat or those brought to him by others.

Severe chilling of the body from sitting in a draft while overheated, or falling into cold water, may profoundly affect the circulation of the blood through the lungs and permit these germs, known as the pneumococci, to gain a foothold there.

Breathing irritating gases or dust may possibly accomplish the same result.

We should always regard the pneumonia patient as dangerous to other persons and should disinfect the discharges from his mouth or nose and all other articles used by him at the bedside.

The bulk of preventive measures must, however, be directed against the predisposing causes. Do not consider yourself so strong, and so hardy that you can afford to sit in a cold draft when you are overheated or dispense with an overcoat on long cold rides. If such exposure has been unavoidable do your best to restore a normal condition of circulation before you go to bed. A warm drink, a bath, a rubdown and warm, dry clothing may readily make the difference between continued health and an attack of pneumonia.

Try to keep yourself fit by the rational use of air, food, sunlight, work, recreation and sleep. If you are attacked by any disease which is accompanied by fever, go to bed at once.

An important factor in preventing pneumonia is the avoidance of other acute infectious diseases.

LEE CENTER TO ENTERTAIN S. S. ASSN. SUNDAY

District Meeting Will be Held in Church in Afternoon

Lee Center—Deputy Sheriff, A. H. Hill's talk in church Sunday morning on Law Enforcement proved most interesting and enlightening. The poisonous effect of the deadly moonshine on young men was graphically portrayed. Our county board of supervisors have refused to allow $3,000 to fight the violation of the Volstead act, although the county has taken in over $25,000 in fines. Deputy Hill is waging a fearless unflinching war against the bootleggers as he believes a rigid enforcement of the law is the only means of saving young people of both sexes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Willis motored to Rockford Sunday to visit the family of the former's cousin, Archie Willis. Mrs. M. G. Briggs entertained Mesdames Sarah King, L. A. Bedient and George Brewer with a chicken dinner a short time ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Macken and family of West Brooklyn visited at the Rena Halsey home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Lippincott and P. M. Blowers were entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening at the S. E. Dishong home in honor of Faith's thirteenth birthday. Instrumental music added much to the pleasure of the occasion.

Mesdames R. A. Hillison and W. S. Frost were guests at a bridge party Saturday in Amboy given by Mrs. Ella Leake and her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Brink. There were nine tables and the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

The district Sunday school convention will be held in the church here next Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m. Rev. L. V. Siller of Franklin Grove will give the principal address and the different Sunday schools of the district will furnish a program of songs and talks.

Rev. Harry H. Pollard attended the joint meeting of the Bureau and Rock River association in the First Congregational church in Kewanee Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stanard who moved to LaMoille last week will be greatly missed here as Mrs. Stanard is an accomplished pianist and was always willing to assist in programs when her talent gave much pleasure. Rev. H. Pollard will deliver an Armistice Day sermon next Sunday.

as that day comes in the ensuing week. Special music is being arranged for. Mrs. Pollard who has been confined to her home following her tonsillar operation is improving slowly. Among those from this locality who heard "Hansel and Gretel" sung by the Misses Reynolds of Dixon in the Amboy high school auditorium Monday night were Mesdames Brewer, Shaw, Ross, Hillison, Frost, Superintendent and Mrs. Paul Roberts. All were charmed with the exquisite voices and wonderful technique of the singers.

Mrs. L. A. Bedient was seriously ill several days this week but is somewhat improved at this time.

Nachusa School to Give Entertainment in Church Friday

Nachusa—An entertainment and social will be given by the scholars of the Nachusa school, with Miss Edythe Hill as teacher, Friday evening, Nov. 6 in the basement of the church, to which all are invited to attend.

That Wonderful Quaker Flavor

Is true Scotch flavor—only QUAKER OATS has it

THE one thing to remember in buying oats is that Quaker Oats has the flavor you want. The difference is great.

Oats, originally a Scotch dish, must have a certain Scotch flavor.

There's real Scotch tang to that Quaker flavor.

No other brand has it. None successfully imitates it. It's due to exclusive Quaker milling of the finest, plumpest oats. Milling methods which took some 50 years to perfect.

Makes all the difference in the world. Quaker flavor spoils folks for ordinary brands.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. No kitchen muss busy mornings. Faster than plain toast.

Due to Quaker milling methods, it supplies, too, the "roughage" you need to make laxatives seldom necessary.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement tonight—either to Bingham Carrington or Saltonstall Cabot Adams—or he disinherited her aunt. But instead of being in auntie's Connecticut home Connemara is now at the edge of the sound about to board a ferry for Long Island with David Lacy, whom she saw for the first time only an hour or so ago. It's a foggy, stormy night—a great night for bootleggers—as the ferryman has just observed. Back home, auntie, Bing and Salt are all worrying.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Bing would have died rather than let his eyes follow Miss Celimena's to the slow-moving hands of the old clock, but all the same he knew at the precise instant she did when they pointed, after centuries had passed, to five minutes of twelve.

Whether the entire, queerly garbed assemblage had been watching the clock also, there are, of course, no means of knowing, but the fact remains that there was a sudden, concerted halt of the dancers, and—after a straggling diminuendo wail from the blaring saxophone, and an uncertain thump or two from the drums—the orchestra followed their example and fell into abrupt and motionless silence.

A hundred pairs of eyes were turned expectantly from one entrance of the ballroom to the other, in search of a slim, straight little figure in the white robes of a Dominican Sister, minus the veil and head covering, coming to end the evening's play with the all-important announcement.

Poppy Glenn in particular, seemed unusually nervous, twisting her pretty neck to crane inquisitively over first one plump bare shoulder and then the other in her efforts to keep both doors in sight at the same time.

"If Connemara bobbed her hair it meant she was engaged to me?"

A full minute ticked itself away laboriously, and the strain grew. There were stifled giggles here and there in the room, and an impatient tapping of high heels that had the restless, staccato tempo of castanets. Then, suddenly, as if in response to his cue, in the right-hand doorway appeared the stately figure of Judson, Miss Celimena's white-headed butler, carrying a small tissue-paper package in his hands.

And with the eyes of the room upon him, straight up to Saltonstall Cabot Adams went Judson, as unhurried and matter-of-course as though about to announce that dinner was served, and laid the package in Salt's astonished hand.

"Miss Connemara told me early this evening I was to deliver it at midnight, sir," quoth Judson, and his part played, departed discreetly.

Bing with his face as white as Saltonstall's was scarlet, held his chin high by sheer instinct of pride, for, like the other man, he was past conscious analysis of his actions. Poppy, who happened to be beside Salt, leaned forward with impertinent assurance and read aloud the clear black handwriting of the package's superscription:

"Saltonstall Cabot Adams, Esq.
According to Agreement,
Constance Mary Moore,
June 30th, 12 p. m.

"My gracious, but she's being legal and exact. Congratulations, Salt, old top! Now hurry and open it up!"

It is probable, so great was Miss Glenn's curiosity and eagerness, that if her suggestion had not been promptly acted upon by the successful suitor, she would have snatched the little package out of his hand and opened it then and there herself.

But, recovering somewhat from his astonishment at the girl's energetic command, Salt ripped off the silver ribbon tied about the small, limp white bundle, and rather cautiously began to unroll the paper covering.

A little gasp of released breaths went up about him as a long, silky something, sinuous as if actually alive, warmly red—no, auburn, excuse us, Connemara—with surface sheen of gold where the light touched it, lay across his open palm, the discarded tissue-paper wrapping slipping to the floor at his feet. A thick, deliciously curling lock of Connemara's famous hair, clipped off by vandal shears, and then romantically and daintily tied up in tissue paper and silver ribbons and sent to her lover, for all the world like the heroines of picturesque but out-of-date days when Knighthood was in flower.

And Connemara the most up-to-the-minute and rebellious of moderns too! Still, it undoubtedly was a dramatic touch and went rather well with the fantastic costumes of the audience.

They broke into a storm of applause that was almost hysterical in its relief at the ending of the strain. And Salt, carried out of his usual grave pomposity of manner by this proof of his triumph, forgot that he hated the limelight, and actually had made a stiff little speech before he could stop himself.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," he said seriously—"Ladies and Gentlemen, it has been, very fittingly, left to me by Miss Connemara Moore to make the evening's anticipated and happy announcement."

After which he went on and made it, formally, correctly, as one who was at once a Saltonstall, a Cabot, and an Adams might be expected to do, and it was neither a bad enough nor good enough speech to be remembered ten minutes after he made it by anyone present, if it had not been for the unforeseen denouement just before the next to the last sentence as he had it outlined in his mind.

Somebody's very muscular hand closed unexpectedly on Salt's arm, and spun him right about face with a suddenness that jarred his teeth together violently.

The voice of Bing Carrington, entirely shorn of its lazy Virginian drawl, fell in furious accents upon the close and startled air of the packed ballroom.

"How in thunder," it inquired with ominous restraint, "do you get that way? Didn't you take in the very plainly expressed agreement that if Connemara bobbed her hair it meant she was engaged to me?"

With a quick gesture he snatched the auburn lock from the other's hand, and held it aloft before all the eyes.

"Well?" demanded young Mr. Bingham Carrington, his chin up at least an inch and a half as he faced the room with his challenge.

"Why—why—" It was Poppy Glenn, on the verge of hysterics from sheer excitement. "That was the agreement. Of course it was, Bing!"

Stunned silence—broken giggles—a circle of staring eyes—

"I," said Bing, in his most magnificent manner, which could be very magnificent indeed when he had an occasion to rise to, "have the honor of announcing, for Miss Moore and myself, our engagement." His eyes gleamed with reckless laughter that picked up answering smiles, warm and friendly, from those nearest him. "I'm waiting for congratulations, everybody, and it'll take a darn lot of them to make up for what I went through when old Judson marched over and handed Salt that package," he wound up in an ingeniously youthful outburst.

"Perhaps you can explain why, in that remarkable eventuality," Salt asked icily, "Connemara sent the package to me?"

"To let you know you were out of it, of course," Bing Carrington said, with easy assurance, still holding on to Connemara's disputed curl. "And possibly, too, because she's a generous, warm-hearted child who's sorry to hurt anyone, she sent it to you for a little keepsake to remember her by. Perfectly natural and simple thing to reason out for any one who understands Connie Moore." He shrugged, as if finished with the subject forever.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN W. BROOKIE, hardware manufacturer and widower, arranges to have an efficiency expert take charge of his household while he is out of the city for a period of two months. He leaves town without telling his plans to his grown children, Constance, Billy and Alice.

H. HEDGE, assigned to the job, arrives at the Brooke mansion, takes over the owner's sleeping quarters, and proceeds to systematic operations. He is in the library, now turned into an office. The "children" are discussing this altogether strange situation thrust upon them 24 hours previous. They are trying to decide which of them shall inform Hedge that their monthly allowance is due.

For an instant the efficiency man's gaze roved. Alice, garbed much as her sister, with the exception that she wore loose knickerbockers instead of a skirt, was just clearing a bar that was balanced some four feet from the floor. Billy was pulling viciously at a set of pulley weights attached to the farther wall. Scattered about the gymnasium were several pieces of idle apparatus.

There was a sharp snap and the

brooding of the bag against its wooden barrier ceased abruptly. H. Hedge turned his head, just in time to see a globular object approaching him at appalling speed. There was no time to dodge. The missile struck him fairly in the middle of his forehead, bounded back with equal suddenness, and rolled along the floor to a far corner.

A broken cord was dangling over Constance Brooke's head as she stood rigid for an instant, breathing heavily and staring with wide eyes at the efficiency man. He was rubbing his forehead in a bewildered way and returning her stare. There was a shriek of laughter from Alice: an "I'll be" from Billy.

The bagpuncher bit her lip, frowned, but said never a word. Pulling off her gloves, she tossed them aside, marched rapidly to the door, brushed past Hedge and disappeared. Horace noted a glint of triumph in her eyes.

The efficiency man strolled across the gymnasium and retrieved the bag from the corner where it lay. He examined it curiously, noting the bulge, bit of cord that was attached to it and nodding his head in evident approval. As he turned the leather sphere in his hands he observed that it had been marked upon, apparently with chalk. The inscription was half obliterated by busy hands, yet still legible. It said:

"It seems that each one has her own way of producing an impression," mused the efficiency man. "I'll admit I'm impressed!"

They made Alice do it, after dinner. A furtive inspection of the efficiency man revealed no scars as a result of his encounter with the punching bag; he displayed no discernible sign of a grudge. The time seemed as propitious as any, while the need was dire and urgent.

Alice played that she was reading, and presently looked up from her magazine and murmured softly: "There's an article about poverty here, Mr. Hedge. It must be awful!"

"Sinful," he affirmed. "Were you ever poor?"

"Indeed, yes." He looked at her sharply.

"But you're not poor now?"

"Not—exactly."

"I am," said Alice, plaintively. H. Hedge made an exclamation with his eyes.

"I don't own a solitary buck," added Alice. "Neither does Billy. And Connie has only two seventy-nines."

She paused impressively, then continued:

"But—this is pay day."

"Pay day?" echoed H. Hedge, wrinkling his forehead. "Whose?"

"Why—ours!" Alice's gesture included the other Brookes.

Constance was studiously observing the fire, while Billy continued his artistic ramble. The keen ears of neither, however, missed a word.

"I didn't know you had a pay day," remarked Hedge.

"Yes, indeed! Once a month, you know."

"That's interesting, I'm sure. Who pays you?"

"Father, of course. Who else would?"

"What for?"

"Why—why, just for being his children, of course!"

Alice stared at him uneasily, then ventured a sidelong glance at Constance. That young lady's head was turned away.

"You mean that you get salaries for being Mr. Brooke's children?"

"Allowance, I suppose you'd call it," answered Alice with a hesitant smile.

"Oh!" said the efficiency man, his bewilderment vanishing. "You mean that each of you receives a stated gratuity from your father?"

Billy glared blackly at Hedge, who failed to perceive the expression. Constance, her head still averted, was frowning.

"He never calls it that," faltered Alice, angry, yet mindful of the end rather than the means. "He—he just pays it."

"And what do you do in return for it?"

"We? Why, we just love him!"

Constance cleared her throat ostentatiously. It was a signal. She did not favor Alice's frank attack; she had counseled a frontal assault, boldly and swiftly executed. Besides, Alice seemed about to commit the family to an impossible policy.

"I see," said the efficiency man gravely. "And how much does he pay you?"

"Billy and Connie, two hundred dollars a month. Me, one hundred. I'm to be raised at my next birthday."

H. Hedge began to write figures on a pad.

"And this," added Alice, "is the day that all the money is due."

Hedge continued to figure for a moment.

"I find from your statement," he said, looking up, "that your father distributes to you three children gratuities amounting in all to $5000 annually."

"Really, so much as that?" asked Alice deprecatingly. "But you see, it's only a little at a time. And father has such a lot more."

Billy, who had strolled close to Constance, leaned over and said in a growling whisper:

"Course wait. She's flummoxed."

"Hush, Billy. Wait."

"I suppose," the efficiency man observed, "that this is a request for me to continue a distribution of the gratuities."

NEXT CHAPTER: Hedge dictates terms.

Her hands were doubled into fists and the fists were smashing rhythmically—right, left, right, left—against the swaying bag. Every time a fist drove the bag against the wooden disk, the bag rebounded only to meet another fist lying craftily in wait. Constance was breathing sharply; her eyes were glistening with excitement.

For an instant the efficiency man's gaze roved. Alice, garbed much as her sister, with the exception that she wore loose knickerbockers instead of a skirt, was just clearing a bar that was balanced some four feet from the floor. Billy was pulling viciously at a set of pulley weights attached to the farther wall. Scattered about the gymnasium were several pieces of idle apparatus.

There was a sharp snap and the brooding of the bag against its wooden barrier ceased abruptly. H. Hedge turned his head, just in time to see a globular object approaching him at appalling speed. There was no time to dodge. The missile struck him fairly in the middle of his forehead, bounded back with equal suddenness, and rolled along the floor to a far corner.

A broken cord was dangling over Constance Brooke's head as she stood rigid for an instant, breathing heavily and staring with wide eyes at the efficiency man. He was rubbing his forehead in a bewildered way and returning her stare. There was a shriek of laughter from Alice: an "I'll be" from Billy.

The bagpuncher bit her lip, frowned, but said never a word. Pulling off her gloves, she tossed them aside, marched rapidly to the door, brushed past Hedge and disappeared. Horace noted a glint of triumph in her eyes.

The efficiency man strolled across the gymnasium and retrieved the bag from the corner where it lay. He examined it curiously, noting the bulge, bit of cord that was attached to it and nodding his head in evident approval. As he turned the leather sphere in his hands he observed that it had been marked upon, apparently with chalk. The inscription was half obliterated by busy hands, yet still legible. It said:

"It seems that each one has her own way of producing an impression," mused the efficiency man. "I'll admit I'm impressed!"

They made Alice do it, after dinner. A furtive inspection of the efficiency man revealed no scars as a result of his encounter with the punching bag; he displayed no discernible sign of a grudge. The time seemed as propitious as any, while the need was dire and urgent.

Alice played that she was reading, and presently looked up from her magazine and murmured softly: "There's an article about poverty here, Mr. Hedge. It must be awful!"

"Sinful," he affirmed. "Were you ever poor?"

"Indeed, yes." He looked at her sharply.

"But you're not poor now?"

"Not—exactly."

"I am," said Alice, plaintively. H. Hedge made an exclamation with his eyes.

"I don't own a solitary buck," added Alice. "Neither does Billy. And Connie has only two seventy-nines."

She paused impressively, then continued:

"But—this is pay day."

"Pay day?" echoed H. Hedge, wrinkling his forehead. "Whose?"

"Why—ours!" Alice's gesture included the other Brookes.

Constance was studiously observing the fire, while Billy continued his artistic ramble. The keen ears of neither, however, missed a word.

"I didn't know you had a pay day," remarked Hedge.

"Yes, indeed! Once a month, you know."

"That's interesting, I'm sure. Who pays you?"

"Father, of course. Who else would?"

"What for?"

"Why—why, just for being his children, of course!"

Alice stared at him uneasily, then ventured a sidelong glance at Constance. That young lady's head was turned away.

"You mean that you get salaries for being Mr. Brooke's children?"

"Allowance, I suppose you'd call it," answered Alice with a hesitant smile.

"Oh!" said the efficiency man, his bewilderment vanishing. "You mean that each of you receives a stated gratuity from your father?"

Billy glared blackly at Hedge, who failed to perceive the expression. Constance, her head still averted, was frowning.

"He never calls it that," faltered Alice, angry, yet mindful of the end rather than the means. "He—he just pays it."

"And what do you do in return for it?"

"We? Why, we just love him!"

Constance cleared her throat ostentatiously. It was a signal. She did not favor Alice's frank attack; she had counseled a frontal assault, boldly and swiftly executed. Besides, Alice seemed about to commit the family to an impossible policy.

"I see," said the efficiency man gravely. "And how much does he pay you?"

"Billy and Connie, two hundred dollars a month. Me, one hundred. I'm to be raised at my next birthday."

H. Hedge began to write figures on a pad.

"And this," added Alice, "is the day that all the money is due."

Hedge continued to figure for a moment.

"I find from your statement," he said, looking up, "that your father distributes to you three children gratuities amounting in all to $5000 annually."

"Really, so much as that?" asked Alice deprecatingly. "But you see, it's only a little at a time. And father has such a lot more."

Billy, who had strolled close to Constance, leaned over and said in a growling whisper:

"Course wait. She's flummoxed."

"Hush, Billy. Wait."

"I suppose," the efficiency man observed, "that this is a request for me to continue a distribution of the gratuities."

"You will forgive me, lady fair," mused Melville Sartoris in his letter. "I assure you I am not in any way trying to belittle your husband. He's an upstanding sort of a chap even if a little self-sufficient."

"I'm only trying to convey to you the fact that as an outsider, a man who has had a great deal of experience in observing people, I am quite sure that the friend of husband is the lover of wife."

"There, I know I've expressed myself awkwardly, for not for one moment do I think that Friend Sydney has ever told you how much he cares for you. Indeed, I think he has kept his head stuck in the sand of coldness and like an ostrich thinks that all the world would not have you see is covered."

"Nevertheless, I know that with your woman's perspicacity, you are well aware that the man who always comes at your husband's call does not always do it because of the love he bears to him alone.

"In having a quiet smile as I think of your consternation that I would dare to write you the things that I am writing, but, because of
